sometimes Stochelo picks the 16ths triplets up, sometimes down and other times two down, one up (bar 48). The lesson to be learnt is: it really doesn't matter, do what comes natural.

Easy but very effective lick from A7 to D minor.
One to practice in many keys

D- E⁷

Stochelo's signature thirds lick. I only hear Stochelo play these licks in bossas, not in swing tunes!

Lyrical phrase. Fits over Em7b5 and G minor

Fast minor run. Usually played starting on the A-string but here's Stochelo's fingering starting on the E-string.

D- E7

This is lesson 10 exercise 5 from the technique course!

77

E^o A7

In bar 78 we see a very rare example of Stochelo alternate picking a diminished arpeggio. If you would ask him why, he would say that this is just the way he practiced this lick a long time ago. You can try it this way or stick to Stochelo's normal picking patterns. Practice this cool phrase in C-, D- (here), E- and F-

This sounds very exciting and impressive but is in fact very easy. Good stuff if you need some relaxation time in the middle of all your double time licks without losing drivet!

E7

83

This is just a chromatic scale with embellishments to connect two licks. Good trick for when you need to connect licks some frets apart.

Excellent D- 6 lick. Practice in multiple keys!

This second bridge (bar 89 to 95) are exactly the same as the first bridge (bar 57-63), except for bar 96 which is Stochelo's standard lick to get back to the theme of Bossa Dorado.
