Comment:	Baroque musicians of the 18th century wrote suites of dance music written in binary form that typically included a sarabande as the third of four movements. It was often paired with and followed by a jig or gigue. J.S. Bach sometimes gave the sarabande a privileged place in his music, even outside the context of dance suites. In this case, Sarabanda from second English Suite is the last movement of this original Bach's masterpiece. I created arra... (more online)
