On the bat - tle - field of Get - tys - burg one
His young head was bowed in sad de - spair, his ear - ly sum - mer's morn, A sold - ier boy was cap - tured there that day, And the eyes were filled with tears, His pray'rs to God a - bove us, all could hear; When the charge on which they tried him was, "Ar - est - ed as a spy," A cry, "to arms, to arms," was heard, Each sold - ier fell in line, He gal-lant he-ro of our U. S. A. The soft-ly mur-mured "good-bye moth-er dear." His 14

court has passed his sen-tence "And at sun-rise you must die," At thoughts turned back to boy-hood days, A child at moth-er's knee, "May break of day they marched him far a-way, To the ex-e-cu-tion sta-tion, where no God pro-tect her where she is to-day", And while rays of sun-shine soft-ly fell and one could ven-ture in, To meet his death just at the break of day.

played up-on his hair, He bade good-bye then quick-ly passed a-way.

22

Just as the day-light was break - ing, Just as the sun - light shone, —

Chorus

30

There in the still of the morn - ing. Went to his God on the throne, —

38

Up to the fold of his Mak - er, Then you could hear them say —

46

He bade good - bye with a tear, a sigh, Just at the break of day. —
